

ALTIRAS' SOLUTION FOR OFF-SPEC & LANDLOCKED GASOLINE

When companies find themselves with off-spec inventory that cannot be sold, their usual response is to pay another company to dispose of the product. However, Altiras offers an alternative solution that can help turn this situation into a profitable one.

THE CHALLENGE

Altiras purchased 105,000 barrels (BBL) of rejected gasoline from a landlocked midwestern company. Unfortunately, the gasoline was contaminated due to an open valve, making it unsuitable for sale. The off-spec gasoline was then placed into leased slop tanks with other off-spec materials and left for years, further decreasing its value.

THE ALTIRAS SOLUTION

Altiras took an active role in turning off-spec gasoline into profit, from purchase to processing. Initially transported via pipeline to a secondary tank, it was consolidated with other off-spec materials before trucking to a third tank near the Mississippi River. Barge shipping from the Midwest to the Gulf Coast was chosen for its cost-effectiveness. Upon arrival, we processed the gasoline, removing contaminants and rendering it marketable internationally. This not only minimized waste but also generated revenue, showcasing Altiras' commitment to innovative and sustainable solutions for off-spec inventory management.

RESULTS

Altiras Fuels quickly turned unusable gasoline into a valuable asset in just six months. We handled everything from removal to transportation and processing, saving the customer from extra costs. Altiras efficiently managed the entire process, from consolidation to transportation by pipeline, truck, and barge. By taking this approach, we created value from waste at no additional cost to the customer, highlighting the importance of sustainable solutions for off-spec inventory management and setting a standard for other companies.
